MBSA walks the talk with green Raya open house

THE Shah Alam City Council (MBSA) held an environmentally-friendly Hari Raya open house at Stadium Shah Alam.

This is the second year the council has gone green by having a polystyrene-free event.

MBSA corporate communications head Shahrin Ahmad said the city council used the event as a platform to educate residents on the need to conserve the environment by using recyclable containers and utensils.

He said all 16 stalls that served various types of food were not allowed to use polystyrene materials.

"We even provided them with containers to separate their used cooking oil.

"We want these traders to set an example of how everyone can play a role to save our environment," he said, adding that bins were also provided to encourage them to separate their waste, including recyclable items.

More than 10,000 residents attended the function including Selangor Menteri Besar Datuk Seri Azmin Ali and Shah Alam mayor Datuk Ahmad Zaharin Mohd Saad. In addition to plenty of food, guests also enjoyed live musical performances by local artistes.
